

Welcome to World Watch

Hello everyone, and welcome to the very first World Watch from Notes From a B.Tech Brain.

In this series, I'll be breaking down major global updates — events that shape the world, moments that matter, and shifts we simply can't ignore.

Let's dive into this week's headlines.

1. Terror Attack in Pahalgam: India on High Alert

A tragic attack occurred near Pahalgam, Jammu & Kashmir, where terrorists opened fire on an Indian Army convoy. Three soldiers lost their lives, and several others were injured.

Initial intelligence suggests involvement of Pakistan-based terror groups.

Following the attack:

- Border security was tightened
- Diplomatic communication became tense again
- High-level reviews were initiated

It's heartbreaking to see violence repeatedly erode hopes for peace. Security isn't just policy — it's about lives, families, and futures.

2. Water Tensions Rise Between India & Pakistan

After the Pahalgam attack, India signaled potential changes to the Indus Waters Treaty, the historic water-sharing agreement between India and Pakistan.

Reports suggest:

- India may review water commitments
- Adjustments to river flows are being considered
- Pakistan is calling for international intervention

Any shift here affects agriculture, drinking water access, and geopolitical stability across the region.

3. Economic Fallout: Markets React to the Attack

The terror strike caused ripples across India's financial markets.

- Defence stocks surged on expectations of increased spending
- Broader indices like Nifty and Sensex traded cautiously
- Foreign investors grew wary of instability in sensitive regions

If tensions escalate, the wider South Asian economy — trade, energy cooperation, and agriculture — could face consequences.

4. Global Stock Markets Struggle Amid Economic Jitters

Stock markets around the world have seen sharp declines this week.

Drivers include:

- Weak US tech earnings
- Inflation concerns
- Slowing growth in China and Europe

Indian markets also felt the hit, with the Sensex dropping over 600 points in two days. These shifts remind us how interconnected — and fragile — the global economy truly is.

5. Ukraine Conflict: The War Continues

Although media attention has reduced, the war in Ukraine continues relentlessly.

Recent updates:

- Intensified fighting in eastern regions
- Concerns about global fatigue — political, military, and humanitarian
- Millions continue to face daily displacement and violence

The world may look away, but the conflict is far from over.

6. Trump's New Tariff Threats

Former US President Donald Trump is back in the headlines with proposed sweeping tariffs if re-elected.

His plan includes:

- A universal 10% tariff on all imports
- Potential renewed trade wars with China, the EU, and allies
- Uncertain economic impact on global trade systems

Investors worldwide are watching closely — US trade policy in 2025 could reshape the global economy.

Closing Thought

Some weeks remind us how delicate peace, stability, and prosperity truly are. They're never guaranteed — just carefully balanced.

As students and future leaders, staying aware of these shifts helps us understand the world we're stepping into.

Stay sharp. Stay kind. Stay curious.

← Back to home

Engineering insights and discoveries

Reach me out on linkedIn : Zainab Shujat

Home
About
Friday Insights

Tech Pulse
World Watch
Friday Insights